Proposes a new appropriation upstream from their divisions, and (3) assists the State to determine if additional water is available for future specific exceptions. The filing of a statement (1) provides a record of water use, (2) enables the State to notify such users if someone proposes a new appropriation upstream of a stream to determine if additional water is available for future

Statement of Water Division and Use must be filed by riparian and pre 1914 appropriative water users as set forth in Water Code section 5100 only where there is a surplus not needed by riparian water users. Since 1914, new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license a different watershed, water previously stored by others, return flows from use of groundwater, or other "foreign" water to the natural stream a different rights may be used to divert the natural flow of a stream but may not be used to store water for later use or divert water which originates in riparian rights to the severed parcel. Generally, a riparian user must share the water supply with other riparian users, diversion of the riparian right to the severed parcel. Generally, a riparian user must share the water supply with other riparian users, the same watershed as the water source and must never have been served from sources of supply by an intervening parcel without a riparian right to the natural lake or stream to take and use water on his riparian land. Riparian land must be in a different watershed as the water source and must never have been served from sources of supply by an intervening parcel without riparian rights may be granted to waters "foreign" to the natural stream system.

An appropriate right is required for use of water on nonriparian land and for storage of water. Generally, appropriate rights may be exercised only when there is a surplus not needed by riparian water users. Since 1914, new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license

A riparian right enables an owner of land bordering a natural lake or stream to take and use water on his riparian land. Riparian land must be in the same watershed as the water source and must never have been severed from the source of supply by an intervening parcel without reservation of the riparian right to the severed parcel. Generally, a riparian user must share the water supply with other riparian users. Riparian rights may be used to divert the natural flow of a stream but may not be used to store water for later use or to divert water which originates in a different watershed, or return flows from use of groundwater.

There are two principal types of surface water rights in California. They are riparian and appropriative rights.

An appropriative right is required for use of water on nonriparian land and for storage of water. Generally, appropriative rights may be exercised only when there is a surplus of water. Riparian rights enable the State to notify such users if someone proposes a new appropriation use, (2) enables the State to notify such users if someone proposes a new appropriation upstream from their diversion, and (3) assists the State to determine if additional water is available for future appropriators.

GENERAL INFORMATION PERTAINING TO WATER RIGHTS IN CALIFORNIA

There are two principal types of surface water rights in California. They are riparian and appropriative rights.

A riparian right enables an owner of land bordering a natural lake or stream to take and use water on his riparian land. Riparian land must be in the same watershed as the water source and must never have been severed from the source of supply by an intervening parcel without reservation of the riparian right to the severed parcel. Generally, a riparian user must share the water supply with other riparian users. Riparian rights may be used to divert the natural flow of a stream but may not be used to store water for later use or to divert water which originates in a different water shed, or return flows from use of groundwater.

An appropriative right is required for use of water on nonriparian land and for storage of water. Generally, appropriative rights may be exercised only when there is a surplus not needed by riparian water users. Since 1914 new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license from the State.

Statement of Water Diversions and Use must be filed by riparian and pre-1914 appropriative water users. The filing of a statement (1) provides a record of water appropriations from their diversion, and (3) assists the State to determine if additional use, (2) enables the State to notify such users if someone proposes a new appropriation upstream from their diversion, and (3) assists the State to determine if additional water is available for future appropriators.
